

Recognising Bias Workshop

Have you ever been immediately drawn to a stranger? Have you ever felt cautious about getting too close to someone you know nothing about? Or been to a party and felt you just didn't belong?

These are manifestations of unconscious biases that can limit participation and perpetuate inequity.

Join us on Saturday 10 July for a half-day fun workshop that will build your awareness and understanding of the manifestation of unconscious biases that inform how we think, relate and view the world.

Who will lead this workshop?

Deborah May is a gender equity, diversity and inclusion practitioner committed to creating a world where everyone is valued equally; a world that is more connected, compassionate and kind. She has over 25 years experience researching unconscious bias and its impact and has delivered workshops to many different organisations and groups.

In 2012 she was awarded an Honorary Fellowship for excellence and contribution to the Public Sector and Research into Unconscious Bias (2012) by the University of Canberra's Australia New Zealand School of Government.

Where: The Hall @ St Ninian's

When: Saturday 10 July, 9am – 1pm

Cost: $50 or $20 (concession or low income)

To register for the workshop: <https://www.trybooking.com/BRYMI>

An offering from 'The Waterhole' – rest, reflect, replenish